MOTION FOR RECONSIDERATION

This is a Motion for Reconsideration of the Final Office Action that was mailed on January 5, 2012 regarding the above-identified Application.

Refusal – Primarily geographically descriptive

Applicant respectfully requests that the Examiner reconsider the requirement that Applicant disclaim the word "Newbridge" on the ground that NEWBRIDGE is primarily geographically descriptive.

In order for the registration of a mark to be properly refused on the ground that it is primarily geographically descriptive of the applicant's goods, the Examiner must establish (i) that the primary significance of the mark is that of the name of a place generally known to the relevant American purchasing public, and (ii) that the American public would make a goods/place association, that is believe that the goods for which the mark is sought to be registered originate in that place. In re Societe Generale des Eaux Minerales de Vittel S.A., 3

U.S.P.Q.2d 1450, 824 F.2d 957, 960 (Fed. Cir. 1987); In re Brouwerij Nacional Balashi NV, 80 U.S.P.Q.2d 1820, 1821 (T.T.A.B. 2006) (internal citations omitted). If both of these elements are met and the applicant's goods in fact originate in that place named in the mark, then the mark will be found to be primarily geographically descriptive of the goods. See In re Brouwerij Nacional Balashi NV, 80 U.S.P.Q.2d 1820, 1821 (T.T.A.B. 2006). The evidence does not show that Newbridge is a place that is generally known to the average member of the relevant American purchasing public or that such persons would make the requisite goods/place association. In fact the evidence clearly shows that the primary significance of "Newbridge" to the relevant American public is Applicant's goods, not a place, inasmuch as the geographic connotation of "Newbridge" to the American public is minor because of the remoteness and obscurity of Newbridge as a geographic location. In other words, to the relevant American public the reference to "Newbridge" in the mark is not indicative of a geographic origin, but of the Applicant. Assuming only for the sake of argument that Newbridge is not indeed a remote and obscure geographic location to American purchasers of homeware and silver-plated goods, the record does not establish a goods/place association.

(i) History of the Mark

Applicant established a cutlery manufacturing unit in Newbridge, County Kildare in 1934 – over 75 years ago. At the time that Applicant set up its manufacturing unit, there were no other cutlery or silverware manufacturers in Newbridge. Indeed, homeware, cutlery and silverware are not among the traditional industries of Newbridge. Applicant's founders were pioneers of this industry in Newbridge, and they trained and taught the local people an entirely new trade and craft. See Ex. 2 to the First Office Action. The industries of the region were and are rope-making and agriculture. See entry for "Newbridge" in The Columbia

Gazetteer of the World attached at Ex. 21 ("Columbia Gazetteer"). Over the years, Applicant added silverware and other items of homeware to its offerings. The Applicant grew quickly and its marks are extremely well-known for homeware, cutlery, silverware, giftware and jewelry throughout Ireland. See printouts from a very small fraction of third-party websites in Ireland and the United Kingdom (Exs. 2 to 6 hereto) that refer to the Applicant's renown. The attached printouts describe the Applicant in the following manner:

- "The contemporary collection brings together the unique intelligent design of Newbridge Silverware with the best of Irish craftsmanship for which it has become so famous and made it one of the most desirable fashion accessories in Ireland." See Ex. 2.
- "The evolution of the Newbridge Silverware brand from that which was associated with cutlery to a premier name in the design and manufacture of quality jewellery and lifestyle products is indeed remarkable and today the brand is widely regarded as Ireland's premier giftware brand ... As well as being a contemporary shoppers paradise, the Newbridge Silverware showrooms are home to the Newbridge Silverware factory where for 70 years craft workers have been producing the famous cutlery and jewellery. The history of this remarkable company is on full display throughout the showrooms in the form of photographs, memorabilia, media cuttings and archives making it a real place of local interest." See Ex. 3.

- “The unique history of the company provides a wealth of tradition craftsmanship and experience...” See Ex. 4.
- “Ireland’s famous silverware brand, Newbridge, has incorporated British Turntable movement in a major revamp of its showrooms and restaurant areas...” See Ex. 5.
- “Silverware has been crafted in Newbridge since 1934. The passage of half a century has changed little. Craftsmen with a lifetime’s experience fashion the finest materials with traditional skills and loving care. This silver has seduced sheikhs, served sultans, pampered princesses and reflected the gaze of barons and bards.” See Ex. 6.
- “Cutlery and silverware is crafted at the famous Newbridge Silverware plant.” See Ex. 3 to Second Office Action, at p. 3.

(ii) Newbridge, County Kildare, is not well-known to the relevant public in the United States

There is no dispute that the Applicant is located in Newbridge, County Kildare, in Ireland. However, the primary significance of the term “Newbridge” to the average American consumer is the Applicant, not a place because of the obscurity and remoteness of Newbridge as a geographic location. While a part of the settlement may date back to the 12th Century, this will not ipso facto cause the average American consumer to connect the term “Newbridge” with this settlement in Ireland.<sup>1</sup> Indeed, there is no evidence that even Americans of Irish heritage would connect “Newbridge” with Newbridge, Ireland.

Newbridge, where the Applicant is located, is a small town in county Kildare in Ireland. Its total population in 2006 was approximately 17,000 people. See Columbia Gazetteer. The town grew around barracks built here in 1816 and its industries are rope manufacturing and agricultural market. Id. The town houses the headquarters of Bord na Mona, an agency responsible for the exploitation of peat resources. Id. There is nothing in the small town of Newbridge, County Kildare, that would make it anything other than an obscure and remote geographic location to the average American purchaser of the goods for which registration is sought. The evidence relied upon by the Examiner, consisting of printouts of pages from the websites of the Kildare County Council, the Newbridge Town Council, WhiteWater shopping mall located in Newbridge, NewbridgeTown.com, and Irish travel-oriented websites are not probative of a showing that a significant number of relevant American purchasers would know of the geographic significance of NEWBRIDGE as being Newbridge, County Kildare, Ireland. See In re Namibia Breweries Limited, 2011 TTAB LEXIS 309 (T.T.A.B. 2011) (Namibian travel guides and websites directed primarily to Namibian and South

<sup>1</sup> The traditional name of the area that is now also known as Newbridge, County Kildare, is An Droichead Nua (trans. The New Bridge.) There are several minor geographic locations called “Newbridge”, including three in Ireland itself, rendering none of these locations particularly distinctive. See printout from Wikipedia of “Newbridge” at Ex. 7. Also see In re Eastern National, 2001 WL 1547936 (T.T.A.B. Nov. 29, 2001) (the term “Independence Park” “is not particularly distinctive” because there were Independence Parks in at least ten states.) Usually, the presence of a newly-constructed (at the time) bridge would give an area the name of Newbridge. See printouts from Wikipedia of Newbridge, Bath (“The area is named after the New Bridge over the River Avon outside Bath, built in 1734”) and Newbridge, County Galway (The English name Newbridge comes from the village’s iconic bridge over the Shiven River.”), collectively, at Ex. 8. Moreover, Mirriam-Webster’s Geographical Dictionary (3d edn.) does not even have an entry for Newbridge, County Kildare. Its only entry for “Newbridge” refers to Abercarn, a coal-mining region in Wales, formerly known as Newbridge. See Ex. 9. That Welsh town had a population of approximately 17,000 persons in 1981.

African readership do not establish that the primary significance of WINDHOEK to the average American beer purchasers would be its geographic significance.) Moreover, the presence of a golf course or racing track in Newbridge does not alter the remoteness of the place to an average American consumer.

Newbridge is not found in commonly available political maps of Ireland on the Internet. See e.g. printouts of maps available from the following websites, collectively, at Ex. 10: CIA World Factbook, www.infoplease.com, www.worldatlas.com, www.mapsoftheworld.com, www.lonelyplanet.com, and www.geology.com. This lends credence to the fact that Newbridge, County Kildare is remote and obscure to the average American purchaser of homeware, cutlery, or silver-plated jewelry.<sup>2</sup> Newbridge, County Kildare, is not Ireland's largest city, or even in the top ten largest cities of Ireland; it is not Ireland's capital; its population was approximately 17,000 people in 2006; and is not the nation's administrative, educational, communications, or economic center. Windhoek, Namibia, by contrast may be found on every political map of Namibia – being Namibia's largest city with a population of 233,000, its capital, and the nation's administrative, educational, communications, and economic center. See In re Namibia Breweries Limited, 2011 TTAB LEXIS 309 (T.T.A.B. 2011). Also see a printout of the CIA World Factbook for Ireland at Ex. 11. Silverware or homeware are not listed amongst Ireland's exports of any significance. Moreover, Newbridge is not listed amongst Ireland's "Major cities." Id.

The Examiner also has relied upon 5 references to Newbridge, Ireland in what appears to be a search of LexisNexis databases of US Newspapers and Wires. 3 of the adduced references are in the context of the activities of the Applicant's own Museum of Styles Icons and go towards a showing of the Applicant's renown. The remaining 2 references, from The Times - Union (Albany, NY) and The Philadelphia Inquirer make only passing references to Newbridge. Such references do not raise Newbridge in the consciousness of an average consumer of the goods for which Applicant seeks registration. None of these exhibits show that there is a general consciousness among the average American consumer of homeware and silverware that Newbridge is a geographic location.

Finally, the primary significance of "Newbridge" is not a geographic location. The term "Newbridge" consists of the joining of two common words of the English language, namely, "new" and "bridge." The conjoined word is used as a mark or trade name by innumerable businesses in the United States and around the globe to denote/evoke a movement from a position of lack to one of fulfillment, or a means of joining the consumer with his/her goals – in the context of a "bridge" that is "new." Amongst others, Newbridge is used by educational institutions, retirement homes, banks, churches, doctors and brokers. See a very small selection from a vast array of providers of services and goods using "Newbridge" in the context of bridging a gap at Ex. 12 (in order to reduce the size of the attachment, a few non-essential pages from some of the websites have not been included. Should these be deemed necessary by the Examiner, the Applicant will provide the same.) Also see a printout from the USPTO's computerized TESS database of a selection of registrations for marks containing the term "Newbridge" at Ex. 13. A simple search on Google for the term "Newbridge" will show that the non-geographic uses of "Newbridge" as connoting a "new bridge" overwhelmingly outnumber the use of "Newbridge" as a geographic location.<sup>3</sup> For obvious reasons each and every such use has not been included herewith. Very often, the trade name or mark "Newbridge" is accompanied by a drawing, logo, or photograph of a bridge lending further credence to the usage of Newbridge as being a span connecting two places or situations. Thus, a consumer encountering NEWBRIDGE as a mark will not consider the primary significance of NEWBRIDGE to be a geographic location, but a bridge that is new.

(iii) There is no goods/place association

Applicant has been, since its establishment over seventy five years ago, and is the only manufacturer of cutlery, homeware and silverware in Newbridge. See Declaration of William Doyle, the Managing Director of the Applicant at Ex. 1. There simply is no other manufacturer of these goods in Newbridge, County Kildare. The Examiner has not adduced any evidence showing that there is a cutlery or silverware industry, or a manufacturer of those goods in Newbridge other than the Applicant. To the extent that the evidence relied upon by the Examiner is probative of anything, it establishes not that there is a goods/place association, but that given the success and concomitant renown of the Applicant and its NEWBRIDGE marks over a 75-year period, consumers recognize the NEWBRIDGE marks as applied to homeware and silverware as Applicant's marks, not a geographic location. See In re Brauerei Aying Franz Inselkammer, 217 U.S.P.Q. 73 (T.T.A.B. 1973) ("where the geographic significance of a name is lost on the public because of obscurity, there too, the usage becomes

<sup>3</sup> The use of the trade name or trademark "New Bridge" (as two separate words) has not been included, although there is no material difference between "New Bridge" and "Newbridge" insofar as this discussion of primarily geographic and other significance is concerned. The fact remains that Newbridge is a mere conjoining of "new" and "bridge" which is very commonly used in a non-geographic sense.

arbitrary.”) It is clear from even the references adduced by the Examiner that the average American consumers of homeware, giftware and silverware upon encountering Applicant’s mark will not make a goods/place association, but a goods/source association. The NEWBRIDGE marks are distinctive of the Applicant for the applied-for goods.

Applicant has essentially created and it is the cutlery and silverware industry in Newbridge. See printouts from the website www.newbridgehistory.org for the topic “Industry” at Ex. 14. This website lists 3 entries for rope and carpet manufacturers, one for the Board of Peat and only one for Cutlery – under the former name of Applicant. Therefore, if one were to remove the Applicant and its renown from the picture, Newbridge, County Kildare, Ireland would be left with the carpet manufacturers, its market for agricultural produce and the Irish Peat Board. None of these would make Newbridge known to the average American consumer of homeware and silverware as a geographic location, or would cause them to make a goods/place association with these goods.

Applicant maintains that Newbridge is not a well-known center for the manufacture of homeware and silverware independent of the Applicant. It is the Applicant, which is located in Newbridge, County Kildare, that is renowned for the same.<sup>4</sup> Thus, Newbridge’s fame, if any, as a center for the manufacture of those goods is nothing more than the Applicant’s fame. This is borne out by the evidence relied upon by the Examiner. Nearly always, the Applicant is referenced when a reference to Newbridge’s silverware and cutlery is made. The evidence shows that Newbridge is known for silverware that comes from the

<sup>4</sup> The Examiner misconstrues the references to Newbridge on Applicant’s website. These are to the Applicant, Newbridge Silverware, itself, not to the geographical locale. The context in which the term “Newbridge” is used on the website makes this abundantly clear.

Applicant, which set up a manufacturing unit in Newbridge over 75 years ago and then achieved great fame as a source of quality cutlery and silverware. Indeed, history is replete with instances wherein a manufacturer that sets up its unit in an unknown region, gains such far reaching renown that the region itself becomes well-known on account of the manufacturer's renown. For example, Waterford (Ireland) for crystalware and glassware, Belleek (Ireland) for chinaware, Poland Spring (United States) for bottled spring water, Corning (United States) for glass, and Oneida (United States) for cutlery and flatware, are today famous because of the renown of an institution for those goods. All of these also are trademarks that are registered in the United States.

Mark	Goods/Services	Registration No.	Exhibit No. (printout from the USPTO's TESS database)
WATERFORD	Glassware	0951,941	15
BELLEEK	Chinaware and pottery	0646,821	16
BELLEEK LIVING	Cups, dishes, saucers, sculptures, vases, etc.	2,963,653	17
POLAND SPRING	Spring drinking water	1,198,186	18
CORNING	Glass vessels usable for culinary purposes and/or chemicals; glass bowls usable for food; etc.	0545,056	19
ONEIDA	Flat tableware of non-precious metal	0631,695	20

The reference to NEWBRIDGE is incidentally to the geographic location and is primarily to the Applicant. Thus, this term does not signify a place with which an average relevant American consumer will be familiar. The phenomena, that a place may acquire a secondary signification due to the renown of a particular manufacturer, has been articulated over a century ago by the United States Supreme Court:

True the name is geographical; but geographical names often acquire a secondary signification indicative not only of the place of manufacture or production, but of the name of the manufacturer or producer and the excellence of the thing manufactured or produced ...

La Republique Francaise v. Saratoga Vichy Spring Co., 191 U.S. 427, 435, 24 S.Ct. 145, 48 L.Ed. 247 (1903). Applicant and its marks incorporating NEWBRIDGE have achieved such renown in the sphere of the goods that are recited in the application for registration. Its mark NEWBRIDGE (Logo) has acquired secondary meaning in the minds of consumers as signifying the Applicant. Accordingly, NEWBRIDGE (Logo) no longer means that the homeware was manufactured in Newbridge, County Kildare, or by a Newbridge-based manufacturer, but the consuming public recognizes that NEWBRIDGE (Logo) for the goods for which registration is sought identifies the Applicant as the source.

CONCLUSION

In view of the foregoing, and the response to the first Office Action, which is incorporated in full in this Motion for Reconsideration, it is clear that Newbridge is a remote or obscure geographic location to the relevant United States public and, further, there is no goods/place connection between Newbridge and the goods for which Applicant seeks registration. Having been used over a period of more than seventy five years, the applied for mark is famous. Applicant requests that its application for the mark NEWBRIDGE

(Logo) should be allowed and the mark be registered on the Principal Register without Applicant having to disclaim NEWBRIDGE.

Silverware Turns To British Turntable

Ireland's famous silverware brand, Newbridge, has incorporated British Turntable movement in a major revamp of its showrooms and restaurant areas, using no fewer than 26 ceiling-mounted revolves across three stores to enhance and complement the curved shapes and displays of its new image.

Newbridge CEO William Doyle suggested the concept of a silver-type ball light, in keeping with the gleaming silverware of the shops' merchandise, and it was a natural progression to create rotating glitterballs by using British Turntable's USD5s revolves.

Newbridge has now fitted 22 units in the main outlet in Newbridge, 12 in the showroom and restaurant, five in the entrance and five in the museum area, with two being fitted in each of the other stores. The company also uses the rotators to turn the ball lights in the main jewellery showcase in the Royal Dublin Society (RDS) in Dublin and the National Exhibition Centre (NEC) in Birmingham.

Jim Doyle, Project Manager for Newbridge, is enthusiastic about the result. "The units are really appreciated by staff and customers alike and continue to draw attention. Rotating the lights certainly enhances our products, making them sparkle as the light catches the silver and thus encouraging sales. They have become part of the Newbridge image".

The USD5s revolve chosen by Newbridge is part of British Turntable's portfolio of standard display turntables, which now numbers more than 100. As well as being capable of creating stunning lighting effects by using slip ring models, ceiling-mounted revolves are ideal for displaying products without taking up valuable floor, counter or shelf space. They are also perfect for signage to highlight special promotions or customer service areas as the movement will catch customers' eyes and draw them to the focused area.

British Turntable offers a number of ceiling-mounted models, allowing loads of up to 227 kg to be suspended; all standard models are generally available off-the-shelf, and a hire service is available for short term use or temporary exhibitions. All models are robust, quiet in operation and require minimal maintenance.

Other standard display movement includes point-of-purchase pendulum, oscillating and rotating movement, battery- and mains-operated turntables from 12 mm to 12 metres in diameter and a range of options designed to create more complex integrated display combinations.

There is also a regular bus service to and from Dublin from the Main Street of Newbridge. Local History The present parish of Newbridge is made up of six ancient parishes and portions of others. These are Ballymany, Carnalway, Great Connell, Killashee, Morristown Billar and Old Connell. Great Connell Great Connell was the site of an Augustinian Priory dedicated to Our lady and St. David, founded in 1202 by Myler Fitzhenry, a grandson of Henry I. In 1205 King John confirmed the grant made by Fitzhenry to the Abbey of Connell, a sister house of the monastery of Lathony in Wales, from whence monks came to Great Connell. This tradition became law in 1380 by an act of Richard II, when like all monasteries in the Pale, it was forbidden "to admit mere Irishmen to profession." However, this rule was not always adhered to, as Gaelic names can be found amongst the canons of the 15th century. Great Connell emerged as one of the most important Anglo-Norman monasteries and its wealth was increased when, in 1455, the King granted the Prior the power to acquire lands to a yearly value of £10. Consequently, the priory's possessions were quite extensive and included "the value of 6 parish churches, over 1,260 acres of land, a mill, 5 castles, a demesne of 131 acres, and many dwellings and out-buildings." The Prior was also made a member of the Privy Council. Great Connell's most renowned Prior was Walter Wellesley, who was also Bishop of Kildare, having been appointed to the See in 1529. He held these two positions up to the time of his death in 1539. The monastery survived the Act of Confiscation in 1537, when Wellesley asked that it not be suppressed, as it was united to the Bishopric of Kildare. He also wrote to the Lord Privy Seal "that to this day and hour, is no brother elected in the monastery unless he be of a veray English nation." In addition the Lord Deputy and Council petitioned the King to have Great Connell and fifty other monasteries exempted "for in these homes ... in default of common inns, which are not in this

Order Brochures

Island, the King's Deputy and all his Grace's Council and officers ... have been most commonly lodged at the cost of the said Houses. " They also stressed the importance of the monasteries' educational role.

However, Great Connell was eventually closed in April 1541, when the then Prior, Robert Wesley "surrendered voluntarily and with the consent of the community," thus allowing the order to make terms and receive pensions. The priory was then granted to Edward Randolph and later to Sir Edward Butler. According to the Civil Survey of 1654, the parish of Great Connell was divided between two men, Sir Nicholas White of Leixlip, and Sir Robert Meredith.

In the 18th century the monastery, according to a description by Archdall, who visited it in 1781, was "so decayed that scarcely any descriptive account can be given of its remaining ruins," though he did mention "two Gothic windows and some pillars with curious capitals," and " the remains of some stalls in the choir. "

The Capella of Ballymany

Evidence that a church existed here at one time was re-inforced by the Kildare Archaeological Society's findings, which discovered evidence of a site at Murphy's farm at Ballymany. An article in their Journal of 1905 described the existing ruins as " consisting of a foundation of an ancient edifice which shows it to be 25ft. in length, 18ft. broad and the walls are 3ft. thick. " The article also reported that older people living in the area remembered the ruins of an old church being in existence up to 50 years earlier (1855). No remains of the walls or foundations are now visible, though the location of the church corresponds roughly with the Ballymany church site referred to in Taylor's Map of 1783, between the main Newbridge-Kildare Road and the Green Road. However, this is now thought to have been a Protestant Church, which was adjacent to the Catholic Chapel at the time the map was drawn.

This Protestant church may have originally been a Catholic Church as each of Newbridge's six ancient parochial districts would have had its own church; that of Ballymany may have been abandoned during the confiscations of the 15th century, or even during the Cromwellian or penal times. It was also not unusual for abandoned Catholic churches to be converted for use as Protestant churches.

Further evidence of a Catholic church at Ballymany is also supported by John Spring in a "Report on Popery in Ireland" anno 1731: "There is also a mass-house in the former parish (Great Connell), erected near a year since, instead of the one I had pulled down. This new one adjoins Newbridge and I believe hath been built larger." This would suggest a church at Great Connell prior to 1730, presumably built by Fr. James Eustace, parish priest of Old Connell, Killashee, Ladytown and Morristown Billar during the early 18th century.

The Military Barracks

In the 17th century a bridge was built near Old Connell but this was destroyed in 1798 by a flood. A new bridge was built in its place. The military barracks was constructed over a number of years, on land purchased in 1822 by a Major General, John Freeman. Completed in 1816, the site of the Barracks extended from the present site of the Irish Ropes factory, to the site of the present Garda Station, and as far back as the Athgarvan Road.

The barracks was occupied by the British Army until 1922. Many famous cavalry regiments were stationed here and one of its most famous soldiers was Lord Cardigan, who was stationed with the 15th Hussars in 1832. He later led the charge of the Light Brigade in the Crimean War in October 1854. A description of the town in 1837 said it " consisted of only one street, with a constabulary police station, a dispensary, and an R.C. chapel with a friary, but it is yet in its infancy and there is every prospect of its increase. " The arrival of the barracks heralded the growth and development of Newbridge. The demand for labour during its construction led to population growth, while the maintenance of both the barracks and its occupants ensured the prosperity of the townspeople.

Its importance in economic terms can be gauged from the following description in Porter's Post Office Guide & Directory for Counties Kildare and Carlow in 1910: "The artillery barracks at Newbridge had a garrison of about 800 and stabling for 536 horses. Supplies for the men and their mounts were purchased locally, while hundreds found work in the army installations. In 1922 following the Anglo-Irish Treaty, the British Army evacuated the barracks in Newbridge, resulting in a decline in trade.

The Town Commissioners, anticipating an economic depression, petitioned the Provisional Government for special consideration for the town. In 1923, they approached the Minister for Defence for help, stating that the town's population of 3,000 was almost entirely dependent on the military, with " the army being its sole means of subsistence ". However, they met with little success. The barracks was used as an internment camp by the national army during the Civil War, and the damage done to the building by the internees was one of the reasons given for it not being used by the Free State Army.

In 1925 it was handed over to the Board of Works, and in the following years most of the buildings were demolished to make way for new factories such as Irish Ropes. The church was maintained and was used as a library and then a Town Hall. It now houses a FÁS Training Workshop. Part of the old wall of the barracks can still be seen at the Athgarvan Road. The present town was built in 1934 and was named Newbridge (Droichead Nua).

Irish Ropes

1933 saw a revival in the town of Newbridge following the foundation of the Irish Ropes factory on part of the site of the former cavalry barracks. It was established by an Englishman, Eric Rigby Jones, whose family had traditionally been involved in rope manufacture. It was founded primarily to manufacture ropes, twines and harvest twines using such materials as sisal, manilla and polypropylene fibres for the home market, and in 1937 it extended its range of products to include floor coverings made from sisal.

During the years of the Emergency, 1939-1945, the factory prospered as extra tillage farming was undertaken during this period, leading to an increased demand for its main product, binder twine. In 1946 the company had a workforce of 300 and in the same year it entered the export market. By 1953 the workforce had increased to 400 workers and an export market had been established in 24 countries.

The 1960s saw the company again extend its range of products to include synthetic and wool carpets, bearing such well-known brand names as Tintawn, Cushlawn and Curragh carpets. The workforce continued to rise and in 1969 it reached a peak of 1035. However, the economic recession of the seventies took its toll and by 1975 the workforce had been substantially reduced.

Newbridge, Bath

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Coordinates: 51.387°N 2.394°W

Newbridge is a largely residential electoral ward within Bath, England. Informally, Newbridge refers to the area of Bath that roughly corresponds to the ward boundaries.

Geographically, the Newbridge area centres on Newbridge Road and Newbridge Hill and is bordered (approximately) by the River Avon to the south and the southern edge of Weston Village to the north and from Chelsea Road to the east to out past Oldfield School and the Boathouse pub to the west.

It is the site of Partis College which was built as large block of almshouses between 1825 and 1827. It has been designated as a Grade I listed building.<sup>[2]</sup>

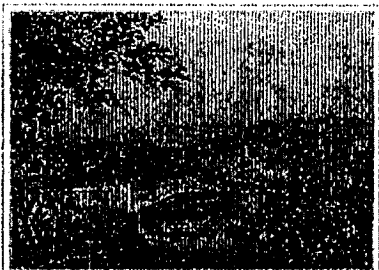

The main shopping area in Newbridge is Chelsea Road, a small area of shops, restaurants and hairdressers. There is a Lloyds TSB bank, a bakery, 2 florists, a cycle shop and nearby on the Newbridge Road there is a Post Office.

Bath's major hospital, the Royal United Hospital, is in the north of the ward in an area called Combe Park, bordering Weston Village. Lansdown Cricket Club's ground is close to the hospital.

The National Cycle Network Bristol & Bath Railway Path runs westward from Newbridge to Bristol, and a continuation riverside cycle path runs into central Bath.

The New Bridge

The area is named after the New Bridge over the River Avon outside Bath, built in 1734. This was built to replace a ford that was one of the last impediments to navigation between Bristol and Bath. The bridge had voids and arches on either side to allow flood water to pass easily. The bridge was widened and improved in the 1830s to the version that now carries the A4 road from Bath to Bristol out of Newbridge.<sup>[3]</sup>

Government :: IRELAND

Economy :: IRELAND

Economy - overview:

Ireland is a small, modern, trade-dependent economy. Ireland was among the initial group of 12 EU nations that began circulating the euro on 1 January 2002. GDP growth averaged 6% in 1993-2007, but economic activity has dropped sharply since the onset of the world financial crisis, with GDP falling by over 3% in 2008, nearly 7% in 2009, and less than 1% in 2010. Ireland entered into a recession in 2008 for the first time in more than a decade, with the subsequent collapse of its domestic property and construction markets. Property prices rose more rapidly in Ireland in the decade up to 2007 than in any other developed economy. Since their 2007 peak, average house prices have fallen 47%. In the wake of the collapse of the construction sector and the downturn in consumer spending and business investment, the export sector, dominated by foreign multinationals, has become a key component of Ireland's economy. Agriculture, once the most important sector, is now dwarfed by industry and services. In 2009 the COWEN government moved to guarantee all bank deposits, recapitalize the banking system, and establish partly-public venture capital funds in response to the country's economic downturn. In 2009, in continued efforts to stabilize the banking sector, the Irish Government established the National Asset Management Agency (NAMA) to acquire problem commercial property and development loans from Irish banks. Faced with sharply reduced revenues and a burgeoning budget deficit, the Irish Government introduced the first in a series of draconian budgets in 2008. In addition to across-the-board cuts in spending, the 2008 budget included wage reductions for all public servants. These measures were not sufficient. In 2010, the budget deficit reached 32.4% of GDP - the world's largest deficit, as a percentage of GDP - because of additional government support for the banking sector. In late 2010, the former COWEN Government agreed to a $112 billion loan package from the EU and IMF to help Dublin further increase the capitalization of its banking sector and avoid defaulting on its sovereign debt. Since entering office in March 2011, the KENNY government has intensified austerity measures to try to meet the deficit targets under Ireland's EU-IMF program. Ireland achieved moderate growth in 2011 and cut the budget deficit to 10.1% of GDP, although the recovery is expected to slow in 2012 as a result of the euro-zone debt crisis.

Newbridge webcasts

We have produced several short films, or webcasts, to help explain our work, raise awareness of eating disorders and enable you to listen to our specialist staff.

An introduction to Newbridge House

How do I know if my child has an eating disorder?

How do I get eating disorders treatment?

Newbridge House is a specialist eating disorder centre for the treatment of young people aged 11 to 18.

Our service has been designed and is led by Medical Director Professor Hubert Lacey, one of the most experienced and highly regarded eating disorders experts in the UK.

We have a family-centred approach, recognising that effective treatment for a young person with an eating disorder must be fully inclusive and supportive of their family.

Eating disorder treatments

Our inpatient treatment services include two different options – our standard recovery programme and the more recently introduced intensive treatment programme. Patients on both programmes access a wide variety of psychological treatments and group work, with integrated support from a wide range of eating disorder specialists, including occupational therapists and a dietitian. Young people also attend our school at Newbridge House.

Newbridge House provides a welcoming, homely environment in a suburban location. It is not part of a larger psychiatric unit.

We also provide a separate programme of individually-tailored outpatient therapy for young people and adults.

Newbridge House is registered and therefore licensed to provide services by the Care Quality Commission (Provider ID 1-52425324). We are also a BUPA registered provider and member of the QNIC network. Read more about quality assurance from professional organisations who have inspected Newbridge House and reported their findings.

Newbridge Cutlery 1935-70

NEWBRIDGE CUTLERY (1935)

Newbridge Cutlery was established in 1935 in part of the old military barracks in the centre of the town. The factory was originally intended for Tralco, but the good offices of William Norton, leader of the Labour Party at the time, helped secure it for Newbridge. Money from the Industrial Credit Company, some £40,000, helped to finance its start up. The plan was to manufacture silver-plated knives and forks for the home market.

Some local people took shares in the venture, and experts were brought in from Sheffield in England to train the local labour force. Mr J. W. Haigh was appointed managing director and he came over from Sheffield with six men skilled in the craft of cutlery making to train local workers here. One of these men, William Gamble, would stay on and settle in Newbridge. Ten former barracks houses were assigned by the Town Commissioners as living quarters for key members of the work force. By 1939, the factory was working to capacity and had cornered the major share of the Irish market.

During World War II, 1939-45, when imported raw materials were impossible to procure, the factory was able to acquire Irish-based materials to keep the factory going. After the War, a work force of 350 kept the company competitive, and in 1947 it took a 25% share in Sandersons (Newbridge) Ltd, a factory nearby that made saws and files from imported steel for the home market. Because Newbridge Cutlery was a Public Company, it used its increased share capital to purchase a cutlery factory in Enniscorthy, Co. Wexford, as well as other investments in England. It became known as Newbridge Holdings.

In the mid-1950s the factory began to make its own cutlery blanks instead of importing them. In the 1960s they expanded into making hollow-ware (hollow articles of metal like pots, kettles, etc).

But the Anglo-Irish Free Trade Agreement (1965) and the immanence of EEC membership (we joined in 1973) affected the company's future. In 1971 Newbridge Holdings decided to cease manufacturing in Newbridge, and it was sold to a group of local businessmen. J.H. Hayes, Dominic Doyle, Joe McLoughlin, Richard (Dickie) White, Donal O'Rourke and Alan Rountree (who came as Production Manager in 1972) made up the new Board of Directors.

An article in New Link (May 1974) summarised what the working environment in the factory was like. In the Blanking Dept., where strips of stainless steel or nickel were blanked into whatever shape or pattern was required, Jim Mahoney was the foreman (and also in the Blade Forging Shop) and was ably helped by Paddy Mockler. Mervyn Molyneux was in charge of the Spoon and Fork Dept. Jimmy Coffey was the foreman in the Grinding Dept. Richard White worked in the Assembly Dept., and John Murray ran the Finishing Dept. where all spoon, fork and hollow-ware products were polished. Tommy Slattery supervised stainless steel items in the Warehouse and Dispatch Dept.

Nickel silver pieces were sent to the Plating Dept. where they were lowered on trays into huge vats of Plating solutions, where they were left for a time until the required thickness of silver had built up. Noel Boylan looked after the Electro-Plating. John Martin was the Maintenance Foreman, looking after the repairing of machinery. William Kett and Andy Thorpe worked in the Repair Dept., while in the Dispatch Dept. Tom Connors and Bernie Harrigan made sure the orders were sent out all over the world. Mary Hayes looked after the Sales dept.

Bernard Martin, from Paire Muire, summed up the work atmosphere in Newbridge Cutlery: most of us have been together here for many years. We all know each other. We joke and have a laugh among ourselves and no one ever takes offence. We are all workers in this factory. There is nobody here walking around dressed up giving orders.
